Everything you need to know when creating

1. I want every artist to have freedom in how he/she wants to create a page for the AnatomyArchive. Stay close to the templates, so that all pages are readable, but don't be shy to alter small things.

2. if you are publishing a page, but it is not finished yet -> write this somewhere:

not final

3. turn on shortcuts, it makes your life easier

4. if possible draw on grey background, so that its appealing in both dark and white mode + users wont get flashed in dark mode

5. avoid using/drawing explicit content as much as you can -> I don't want to age restrict the site, if possible

5. picture:

- width should be minimum 350 pixels so that the image fills the whole mobile width -> click on the little image symbol to adjust pixels
- don't make images longer than a 9:16 aspect ratio, so that they are fully visible on mobile without scrolling
- 840 width images are perfect (for horizontal images)
- avoid putting 2 pictures beside each other

Reference Pictures

I figured that if you want to successfully study anatomy you need as much "real life footage" as you can get, so I wanted to include a little library of pictures at the end of every page. Use the websites/resources below or any other free to use pictures -> try to include many viewpoints, male and female looking bodies, a variety of models that show different characteristics. Remember to not show completely nude people, so that everyone can use AnatomyArchive.

1. use Wikimedia Commons

follow the licence rules for each picture (usually includes citing the name and link); if you need to blur or crop explicit parts of the picture, make sure to include that in the citing, e.g. „This image is altered: cropped“

2. use ...

3. use ...

not final
